Full-day Tour

Belmont Station

Thursday, May 6

Your Hosts, Central Queensland University welcome you to "Belmont Station" for a full day tour which will exhibit how Agtech can be used to develop and support a whole of property management plan.

The Belmont Research Station has been the premier research station for the north Australian beef industry for over 60 years.

The 3260-hectare property is located 37km north of Rockhampton on the Fitzroy River. It provides the ideal environment for research into livestock production in the tropics and sub-tropics of northern Australia.

The Belmont Research Station tour will link to the Beef 2021 agtech focus, which includes a new initiative, the Ken Coombe Tech Yards.

During this full day tour, guests will experience presentations and demonstrations including:

- Demonstration of the improved DataMuster walk-over weigh system and its use for NLIS compliance and herd management
- Linking DataMuster cattle

production information with Dept of Environment paddock mapping data to assist with whole of property grazing management plans

- Riparian recovery trial – inspection of a new paddock scale riparian recovery trial which is measuring productivity and environmental changes on a series of fenced and unfenced paddocks fronting the Fitzroy River
- Presentations from Central Qld Livestock Centre of Excellence partners AgForce and the Qld Dept of Agriculture and Fisheries.

Guests will then tour CQIRP (Central Queensland Innovation Research Precinct). The tour will include demonstrations and presentations in the testing area for new on-animal sensor technologies to track individual animals and monitor behaviour change.
